Frances L. Pasley and } DC No. MNE-6
Ricky L. Pasley,
Debtors. }

MEMORANDUM DECISION REGARDING MOTION
TO CONFIRM MODIFIED CHAPTER 13 PLAN

M. Nelson Enmark, Esq., appeared on behalf of the debtors, Frances L. and Ricky L. Pasley.

Kristen M. Gates, Esq., appeared on behalf of the chapter 13 trustee, Michael H. Meyer, Esq.

Before the court is a motion by the debtors Frances and Ricky Pasley (the “Debtors”) to confirm their sixth modified chapter 13 plan (the “Modified Plan”). The “below-median-income” Debtors have successfully modified their mortgage, significantly reducing the monthly payments, and they now seek to shorten the term of this bankruptcy from 60 months to 44 months (the “Motion”). In opposition, the chapter 13 trustee Michael H. Meyer (the “Trustee”) contends that reduction of the plan’s term does violence to the “good faith” requirement of 11 U.S.C. § 1325(a)(3)<sup>1</sup> (the “Objection”). After oral argument, the parties waived the right to an evidentiary hearing and the matter was submitted on the briefs and declarations.

<sup>1</sup> Unless otherwise indicated, all chapter, section, and rule references are to the Bankruptcy Code, 11 U.S.C. §§ 101–1532, and to the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, Rules 1001–9036, as enacted and promulgated after October 17, 2005, the effective date of the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act (BAPCPA) of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-8, 119 Stat. 23.

1       Initially, the Debtors were only required to be in bankruptcy for 36 months;
 2 however, there was “cause,” at the time, to extend the term to 60 months. Because cause 3 no longer exists for permitting the Debtors to remain that long in bankruptcy, and 4 because there is no statutory basis to require that they do so, the Trustee’s Objection will 5 be overruled and the Motion will be granted.

6       This memorandum decision contains the court’s findings of fact and conclusions 7 of law required by Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 52(a), made applicable to this 8 contested matter by Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure 7052 and 9014(c). The 9 court has jurisdiction over this matter under 28 U.S.C. § 1334, 11 U.S.C. §§ 1325 and 10 1329, and General Order Nos. 182 and 330 of the U.S. District Court for the Eastern 11 District of California. This is a core proceeding pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(A) 12 and (L).

13 Background and Findings of Fact.

14       The Debtors reside in the foothill community of Oakhurst, California. They own 15 a modest home, valued on their schedules at $150,000 (the “Residence”), which is 16 encumbered by a loan and deed of trust in favor of Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. (the 17 “Mortgage”). Wells Fargo Bank’s proof of claim reports that the Mortgage had an 18 outstanding balance of approximately $203,000, with an arrearage of approximately 19 $7,380, at the commencement of this case. The ongoing monthly payments were initially 20 $1,476.89. The Residence is also encumbered by a second lien in favor of Wells Fargo 21 Bank, for which a claim was filed in the approximate amount of $105,000 (the “Junior 22 Mortgage”). The Debtors also own an automobile, a 2007 Nissan valued in the 23 schedules at $18,000, which serves as collateral for a loan held by Ally Financial in the 24 amount of $15,866 (the “Auto Loan”). One of the Debtors, Frances Pasley, was 25 regularly employed.<sup>2</sup> The other Debtor, Ricky Pasley, was retired and unemployed at the 27       <sup>2</sup> In their responding brief, the Debtors’ counsel makes an offer of proof regarding 28 Mrs. Pasley’s health issues and asks the court to consider that as a factor in the good faith

1 commencement of this case. His only reported source of income was social security and 2 a modest pension. The Debtors have no dependents and their combined gross monthly 3 income, exclusive of the social security benefits, was reported on schedule I as 4 $4,225.31, placing them below the applicable median income for a household of two in 5 California.<sup>3</sup> After allowance for reasonable and necessary expenses, their monthly net 6 income stated on schedule J was $250.

7 The Original Plan. The Debtors commenced this chapter 13 case in January 8 2011. Based on their income, the Debtors qualified as “below-median-income” for 9 purposes of determining which sections of the Bankruptcy Code would govern 10 calculation of the “projected disposable income” they had to pay to unsecured creditors.
 11 Their income status also determined the “applicable commitment period,” the length of 12 time the Debtors’ chapter 13 plan had to provide for those payments.

13 After several unsuccessful attempts at confirming a chapter 13 plan, the Debtors 14 finally confirmed their fifth modified plan, without an objection from the Trustee, in 15 September 2011 (the “Original Plan”). In paragraph 2.03 of the Original Plan, the 16 Debtors committed to make 60 monthly payments to the Trustee in varying amounts, 17 increasing from $313 in months 1 and 2 to $3,339.02 in months 58 through 60.<sup>4</sup> The 18 Original Plan put the Mortgage in class 1, meaning that the ongoing postpetition

20 analysis. However, this Motion can be decided on other grounds, and Mrs. Pasley’s medical 21 condition is not relevant.

22 <sup>3</sup> The annualized current monthly income reported on line 15 of Official Form 22C was 23 $50,703.84. The applicable median family income was $61,954.

24 <sup>4</sup> Paragraph 2.03 of this district’s standard form chapter 13 plan, applicable at the time of 25 this case, states in pertinent part,

26 Commitment period. The monthly plan payments will continue 27 for ____ months, the commitment period of the plan. Monthly plan 28 payments must continue for the entire commitment period unless all allowed unsecured claims are paid in full over a shorter period of time. . . .

1 payments had to be paid through the Trustee and the prepetition arrearage would be 2 amortized over the 60-month term, making the total paid on account of the Mortgage 3 claim $1,641.49 per month. The Auto Loan was placed in class 2 as a modified secured 4 claim, to be reamortized over the 60-month term with payments of $293.49 per month.

5 In August 2011, the court granted the Debtors' motion to value the Residence, 6 which effectively made Wells Fargo Bank's Junior Mortgage a "wholly unsecured" 7 claim. Only one other unsecured claim was filed in this case, a credit card obligation to 8 Chase Bank U.S.A. in the approximate amount of $3,000. The Original Plan did not 9 require any distribution to the holders of general unsecured claims. All of the payments 10 over the 60-month term of the Original Plan were devoted to the Mortgage, the Auto 11 Loan, and administrative expenses. In the absence of an objection from the Trustee, 12 there was no dispute that the Original Plan met all of the statutory requirements for 13 confirmation, including the good faith requirement (§ 1325(a)(3)), the chapter 7 14 liquidation test (§ 1325(a)(4)), and the disposable income test (§ 1325(b)(1)(B)).

15 Modification of the Mortgage and the Modified Plan. In October 2013, after 16 Wells Fargo Bank made several changes to the Mortgage payment, the court authorized 17 the Debtors to enter into a loan modification agreement with the Bank (the "Mortgage 18 Modification"). The Mortgage Modification essentially consolidated the remaining 19 prepetition arrearage with the outstanding principal balance. The debt service burden for 20 the Mortgage decreased by roughly $700 a month, from $1,664.72 to $958.56, 21 presumably through a reduction of the interest rate and extension of the Mortgage term.<sup>5</sup>
 22 In support of the motion to authorize the Mortgage Modification, the Debtors filed 23 amended schedules I and J which, after adjusted expenses, reported a new monthly net

 25 <sup>5</sup> The Debtors did not lodge a copy of the actual Mortgage Modification agreement with 26 the court or disclose the specific terms. This court typically will authorize debtors to enter into a 27 negotiated modification of their mortgage if the trustee has no objection and the modification 28 does not interfere with performance of the confirmed plan. However, in the absence of a controversy, the court does not review or approve or disapprove the negotiated terms of the modification agreement itself.

1 income in the amount of $749.89.

2 Following the Mortgage Modification, the Debtors filed the present Motion, 3 seeking to replace the Original Plan with the Modified Plan. Under the proposed 4 Modified Plan, the plan term will be reduced from 60 to 44 months,<sup>6</sup> and the monthly 5 payments to the Trustee will be reduced from the adjusted previous level of $2,060 to 6 $740 for the remaining months. The Modified Plan moves the Mortgage to class 4, 7 which provides for direct payment by the Debtors. With the monthly cash flow savings, 8 the Modified Plan also accelerates amortization of the Auto Loan by increasing the 9 distribution to Ally Financial from $293.49 to $696. The Modified Plan, however, 10 continues to pay nothing to the general unsecured creditors.

11 Issue Presented.

12 The Motion drew the Objection from the Trustee, who contends, inter alia, that 13 the Modified Plan does not satisfy the “good faith” requirement under § 1325(a)(3).<sup>7</sup> 14 Specifically, the Trustee argues that the Original Plan committed the Debtors to make 15 payments to their creditors for 60 months, and that they cannot now shorten that 16 commitment to 44 months. The Trustee contends that the cash which the Debtors will 17 save from the Mortgage Modification, i.e., their new monthly net income, should be 18 distributed to the unsecured creditors after the Auto Loan is paid for the remaining 19 months of the 60-month term. The Trustee does not suggest that the Debtors have 20 engaged in inappropriate actions, simply arguing that the principles of “fairness” and 21 “waiver” support his Objection. The only issue before the court is whether the good 22 faith required by § 1325(a)(3) prevents these below-median-income chapter 13 debtors, 23 who initially confirmed a 60-month plan, from subsequently modifying their plan to

---

24
 25       <sup>6</sup> The Modified Plan was proposed in the 34th month.

26       <sup>7</sup> The Trustee raised other minor objections to the Modified Plan, but the parties agreed 27 that those issues may be resolved in the confirmation order if necessary. The Trustee’s counsel 28 represented that the only unresolved issue, for which a ruling was requested from this court, is the “good faith” term reduction issue.

1 reduce the term.

2 Analysis and Conclusions of Law.

3 The Original Plan and Determination of the Plan Term; the “Cause” Factor.

4 When the Debtors confirmed their Original Plan, the term of that Plan and the required 5 distribution to unsecured creditors were functions of the Debtors’ “projected disposable 6 income.” It is universally accepted that unsecured creditors must receive through a 7 chapter 13 plan either 100% of their allowed claims, see § 1325(b)(1)(A), or “all of the 8 debtor’s projected disposable income to be received in the applicable commitment 9 period,” § 1325(b)(1)(B) (emphasis added). The term “applicable commitment period” 10 is defined by statute and determined by a debtor’s income level. See § 1325(b)(4). It is 11 undisputed that the Debtors’ income was, at the commencement of this case, and indeed 12 still is, “below median.” For such below-median-income debtors, the “applicable 13 commitment period . . . shall be . . . 3 years.” § 1325(b)(4)(A)(i) (hereafter referred to as 14 the “ACP”). The Debtors’ income status not only fixes the minimum plan term, but it 15 also determines the “default” maximum plan term. See § 1322(d). The Debtors, as 16 below-median-income debtors, were statutorily prohibited from confirming a chapter 13 17 plan that was “longer than 3 years, unless the court, for cause, approves a longer period 18 [not to exceed 5 years].” § 1322(d)(2).

19 This court routinely approves, with the Trustee’s consent, chapter 13 plans for 20 below-median-income debtors which exceed 36 months. The most common cause for 21 such extension is the debtor’s need for additional time to amortize the mortgage 22 arrearage, the automobile payments, and/or the priority tax claims. See 8 Collier on 23 Bankruptcy ¶ 1322.18[1][b], at 1322-61 (16th rev. ed. 2013) (“The usual reason for 24 extension of plan payments beyond three years for debtors subject to section 1322(d)(2) 25 is the debtor’s inability to cure a default under section 1322(b)(5) or to pay priority or 26 allowed secured claims in a shorter time.” (citations omitted)).

27 Here, the Debtors initially confirmed a 60-month plan, which allowed them to 28 reamortize the Mortgage arrearage and the Auto Loan claim. Those two obligations

1 alone totaled more than $23,000, and it cost the Debtors approximately $475 per month
 2 to pay those obligations over a 60-month term. It is apparent from schedules I and J that 3 the Debtors did not have sufficient income to amortize those obligations in less than 60 4 months. Accordingly, at the time of confirmation, there was cause within the meaning of 5 § 1322(d)(2) to extend the term of the Original Plan to 60 months.

6 The Modified Plan and Reduction of the Plan Term. Now, the circumstances 7 have changed. The Debtors have successfully modified their Mortgage and gained the 8 benefit of a substantial reduction in their monthly debt service burden, presumably 9 enhancing the Debtors' ability to keep both their home and automobile and successfully 10 emerge from bankruptcy. Due to the Mortgage Modification, the Debtors no longer need 11 to cure the Mortgage arrearage through a plan. Further, with the monthly savings 12 resulting from the modification, they are now able to pay off the Auto Loan in 44
 13 months. As a result, there no longer appears to be any cause for an extended plan term 14 beyond the 44 months requested by the Debtors in their Modified Plan.<sup>8</sup>

15 Modification of a confirmed chapter 13 plan is governed by § 1329. The 16 Modified Plan, if approved, will replace the Original Plan. See § 1329(b)(2). Pursuant 17 to § 1329(b), the "projected disposable income" requirement of § 1325(b)(1)(B) is no 18 longer an immediate condition for post-confirmation plan modification; it essentially 19 merges into the good faith test under § 1325(a)(3). See Sunahara v. Burchard (In re 20 Sunahara), 326 B.R. 768, 781 (9th Cir. BAP 2005). However, under § 1329(c), the ACP 21 defined in § 1325(b)(4) is still relevant because it controls the maximum plan term. The 22 court is compelled to revisit that issue and determine anew whether there is cause to 23 confirm a modified plan with an extended term:

24     ///
 25     ///

---

26
 27     <sup>8</sup> The Trustee does not object to the proposed 44-month term on any grounds but good 28 faith. Accordingly, the court is satisfied that 44 months is the appropriate amount of time now required to pay the Auto Loan and complete the Modified Plan.

1 A plan modified under this section may not provide for payments over a 2 period that expires after the applicable commitment period under 3 section 1325(b)(1)(B) after the time that the first payment under the 4 original confirmed plan was due, unless the court, for cause, approves a 5 longer period, but the court may not approve a period that expires after five 6 years after such time.

7 § 1329(c) (emphasis added).

8 The language of § 1329(c), applicable to the Modified Plan, is consistent with that 9 of § 1322(d), applicable to the Original Plan, in that they both fix a maximum term for 10 chapter 13 plans based on a debtor's income level, which for these below-median 11 Debtors results in a maximum term of 36 months. Compare §§ 1329(c), 12 1325(b)(4)(A)(i), with § 1322(d)(2). Again, the maximum term of any modified chapter 13 plan may only be extended for cause, and there is no apparent cause here to support a 14 modified plan with a term longer than 44 months.

15 The Trustee also suggests that confirmation of the Original Plan established a new 16 ACP of 60 months. Presumably, the Trustee is basing this argument on paragraph 2.03 17 of the Original Plan, which designates 60 months as the "commitment period of the 18 plan," meaning the number of months the Debtors needed to make payments for the 19 successful completion of that Plan. However, the ACP relevant to this analysis is 20 defined by statute, not by any provision in the Original Plan. At the commencement of 21 this case, the ACP for these Debtors was, and still is, 36 months. Nothing in the Original 22 Plan or applicable law changes that. Even though the Original Plan carried a longer 23 term, the Debtors are statutorily precluded from modifying their chapter 13 plan with a 24 term that exceeds 36 months unless there is cause to do so. See § 1329(c). With the 25 Mortgage Modification, there is no longer any cause for the Debtors to have a plan that 26 extends for 60 months.

27 Application of the "Good Faith" Test. It is fundamental that modification of a 28 confirmed chapter 13 plan be "proposed in good faith and not by any means forbidden by 29 law." § 1325(a)(3); accord Mattson v. Howe (In re Mattson), 468 B.R. 361, 367 (9th Cir. BAP 2012) ("[Section 1329(b)(1)'s] reference to § 1325(a) means that the plan as

1 modified must be proposed in good faith under § 1325(a)(3).”). The Debtors have the 2 burden of proof here. See Max Recovery, Inc. v. Than (In re Than), 215 B.R. 430, 436
 3 n.11 (9th Cir. BAP 1997).

4 The Bankruptcy Code does not define “good faith;” that determination is left to 5 the courts. “[T]he proper inquiry is whether the [debtors] acted equitably in proposing 6 their Chapter 13 plan.” Goeb v. Heid (In re Goeb), 675 F.2d 1386, 1390 (9th Cir. 1982).
 7 Good faith is determined by looking at the “totality of the circumstances,” which permits 8 the court to consider (1) whether the debtors misrepresented facts, unfairly manipulated 9 the Bankruptcy Code, or otherwise proposed the plan in an inequitable manner; (2) the 10 history of the debtors’ filings and dismissals; (3) whether the debtors intended only to 11 defeat state court litigation; and (4) whether the debtors’ behavior was egregious.
 12 Leavitt v. Soto (In re Leavitt), 171 F.3d 1219, 1224 (9th Cir. 1999) (considering lack of 13 “good faith” as “cause” for case dismissal); Meyer v. Lepe (In re Lepe), 470 B.R. 851, 14 857–58 (9th Cir. BAP 2012) (reciting Leavitt factors in § 1325(a)(3) analysis). Here, the 15 Trustee does not contend, neither does the record even suggest, that the Debtors have 16 misrepresented any facts, had any prior history of filings and dismissals, filed this 17 bankruptcy to defeat state court litigation, or engaged in egregious behavior. By process 18 of elimination then, the only “good faith” factor under Leavitt for the court to consider is 19 whether the Debtors are attempting to unfairly manipulate the Bankruptcy Code or 20 otherwise propose their Modified Plan in an inequitable manner.

21 “Although a party has an absolute right to request modification between 22 confirmation and completion of the plan, modification under § 1329 is not without 23 limits.” Powers v. Savage (In re Powers), 202 B.R. 618, 622 (9th Cir. BAP 1996). For 24 instance, § 1329(a) “limits the kinds of modifications that can be proposed.” Id. The 25 chapter 13 plan modifications permitted by statute include “increas[ing] or reduc[ing] the 26 amount of payments on claims of a particular class provided for by the plan” and 27 “extend[ing] or reduc[ing] the time for such payments.” § 1329(a)(1), (2). Here, it 28 appears that the Debtors are attempting to do exactly what § 1329(a) allows: reduce the

1 amount of plan payments to the class 1 Mortgage, increase the amount of payments to 2 the class 2 Auto Loan, and decrease the time for such payments by 16 months. The 3 Trustee makes no showing that the Debtors are attempting to manipulate the Bankruptcy 4 Code, and the court is mindful that “[t]aking advantage of a provision of the Code . . . is 5 not an indication of lack of good faith.” Drummond v. Welsh (In re Welsh), 465 B.R.
 6 843, 854 (9th Cir. BAP 2012), aff’d, 711 F.3d 1120 (9th Cir. 2013).

7 Similarly, the court rejects the Trustee’s argument that the creditors have some 8 “right” to expect the Debtors to remain in chapter 13 for 60 months. The good faith 9 analysis under § 1325(a)(3) may also consider “the legal effect of the [modification] of a 10 Chapter 13 plan in light of the spirit and purposes of Chapter 13.” Chinichian v.
 11 Campolongo (In re Chinichian), 784 F.2d 1440, 1444 (9th Cir. 1986). As to this factor, 12 the Trustee argues that the Modified Plan had “originally [given] [unsecured] creditors 13 the opportunity to seek increased payments that correspond to [the Debtors’] increase in 14 income for 60 months.”<sup>9</sup> In support of his argument, the Trustee relies on a discussion 15 by the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit (the “Ninth Circuit”) in Danielson v.
 16 Flores (In re Flores), 735 F.3d 855 (9th Cir. 2013) (en banc), regarding the minimum 17 duration of chapter 13 plans. However, Flores has no application to this case because 18 the debtors in Flores were above-median-income with a 60-month ACP and they were 19 attempting to confirm a plan with a lesser term.

20 In Flores, the Ninth Circuit concluded that the ACP defined in the Bankruptcy
 21 Code acts as a temporal requirement at confirmation, regardless of the debtor’s 22 “projected disposable income,” holding that “a bankruptcy court may confirm a 23 Chapter 13 plan under 11 U.S.C. § 1325(b)(1)(B) only if the plan’s duration is at least as 24 long as the applicable commitment period provided by § 1325(b)(4).” Id. at 862 25 (overruling Maney v. Kagenveama (In re Kagenveama), 541 F.3d 868 (9th Cir. 2008)).
 26 The Ninth Circuit addressed the policy reasons why a plan must have a minimum 27

28 <sup>9</sup> Trustee’s Suppl. Br. 5:9–10, Jan. 23, 2014, ECF No. 117.

duration: “A minimum duration for Chapter 13 plans is crucial to an important purpose of § 1329’s modification process: to ensure that unsecured creditors have a mechanism for seeking increased (that is, non-zero) payments if a debtor’s financial circumstances improve unexpectedly.” Id. at 860. If debtors were not bound to a minimum plan duration, “[c]reditors’ opportunity to seek increased payments that correspond to changed circumstances would be undermined.” Id.

The Trustee offers that analysis to argue that unsecured creditors in this case have an expectation of a 60-month minimum plan duration (i.e., 60 months in which they can potentially seek increased plan payments) based on what the Debtors’ Original Plan provided. However, any temporal condition that the Ninth Circuit may have confirmed in Flores referred to the statutory ACP, not the term established in the initial plan. See id. (noting that “unsecured creditors may request a later modification of the plan to increase the debtor’s payments if the debtor acquires disposable income during the pendency of the applicable commitment period” (emphasis added)). Thus, in this case, to the extent the unsecured creditors had some expectation regarding the term of the Original Plan, that expectation was limited to the only ACP in play here, and that is 36 months. And creditors do not lose that expectation with the Modified Plan since its proposed term is 44 months.

Another factor the court may consider in the good faith analysis is whether the “proposed modification correlate[s] to [a debtor’s] change in circumstances.” Mattson, 468 B.R. at 371. The Trustee argues that the Mortgage Modification is not a sufficient “changed circumstance” to support a reduction in the Plan’s duration. However, the Mortgage Modification is not just a circumstance to be considered here; it is the ultimate reason why the Modified Plan cannot have a 60-month term. By application of § 1329(c), there is no longer cause to justify a 60-month plan.

The court’s conclusion here, that the Debtors may propose their 44-month Modified Plan without running afoul of § 1325(a)(3), is also supported by the Bankruptcy Appellate Panel’s (the “BAP”) pre-BAPCPA decision in Villanueva v.

1 Dowell (In re Villanueva), 274 B.R. 836 (9th Cir. BAP 2002). There, the debtor 2 originally proposed a 60-month plan, rather than a 36-month plan, in order to pay some 3 secured claims. Id. at 839. Before the plan was confirmed, the debtor surrendered the 4 collateral and filed an amended plan with a 36-month term. Id. The bankruptcy court 5 declined to confirm the amended plan on bad faith grounds and required the debtor to 6 extend the term back to 60 months as a condition of confirmation. Id. On appeal, the 7 BAP reversed and remanded the case for the bankruptcy court to enter an order 8 confirming the 36-month plan. Id. at 843.

9 The BAP rejected the bankruptcy court's conclusion that the debtor's 36-month 10 plan lacked good faith just because he had initially proposed a 60-month plan. See id. at 11 842–43. “[T]he proposal of a 36-month plan, standing alone, even where the debtor 12 initially proposed a longer term, does not constitute bad faith.” Id. at 842. The BAP
 13 looked to the pre-BAPCPA version of § 1322(d), which did not allow for any chapter 13 14 plan to be longer than 36 months unless the court found cause to extend the term. Id.
 15 This showed “the Code’s preference for three-year plans” and confirmed that “a creditor 16 could not coerce a debtor into proposing a plan longer than 36 months.” Id. The BAP 17 observed that the debtor “had no motivation to extend the plan term beyond 36 months” 18 after surrendering the collateral:

19 Reducing the plan term may seem opportunistic, perhaps even 20 unfair, but we cannot conclude the debtor’s proposal of his . . . amended 21 plan was not in good faith. [The debtor’s] motivation to stay in his plan 60 months understandably evaporated once he no longer had the [collateral] he wanted to keep.

22 Id. at 843. Here, the same analysis applies to the Debtors’ Modified Plan. However, 23 instead of § 1322(d), the Debtors can rely on § 1329(c) to defeat any suggestion that they 24 can be coerced into a 60-month term.

25 Finally, the Trustee argues that the Debtors must establish that they lack the 26 ability to continue making plan payments beyond the 44th month of the Plan. Indeed, 27 this was part of the BAP’s rationale in affirming the court’s denial of a plan modification 28 in Mattson, 468 B.R. 361. However, Mattson is not applicable here.

1       In Mattson, above-median-income debtors confirmed a 60-month plan in which 2 they would make monthly payments of $150. Id. at 364. Shortly after confirmation, the 3 debtors' disposable income substantially increased. Id. at 364–65. They moved to 4 modify the plan by increasing the payments to $1,000 and reducing the term to 36
 5 months. Id. at 365. The bankruptcy court denied the proposed modification based on a 6 lack of good faith. See id. at 366. The BAP agreed. Id. at 372 (“Debtors’ contribution 7 of a portion of their increased income to their plan for a three year period does not 8 amount to per se good faith.”). The BAP noted that the debtors failed to “point to any 9 facts in the record which showed they would be unable to continue their increased 10 payments beyond the 36 month period that they proposed.” Id. Thus, “allowing them to 11 shorten the term for their plan would be an inequitable result under In re Goeb.” Id.

12       While the holding in Mattson makes a valid point, the case is distinguishable 13 because the debtors there were above-median-income with a 60-month ACP and they 14 were proposing a modified plan with a term less than that permitted by the Code at 15 confirmation. In contrast to Mattson, the Debtors in this case are below-median-income 16 debtors whose proposed Modified Plan, though shorter than the Original Plan, is still 17 longer than their 36-month ACP. The court need not make the same “ability-to-pay”
 18 inquiry in this case because the Debtors are not proposing a Modified Plan that runs 19 afoul of their ACP.

20       The Trustee’s “Waiver” Argument. Before concluding, the court will address 21 the “waiver” issue raised by the Trustee. With reference to the Ninth Circuit’s holding in 22 Flores, 735 F.3d 855, he contends that the Debtors chose to confirm a chapter 13 plan 23 with a “temporal period” of 60 months, that the unsecured creditors now have a right to 24 expect either 100% payment on their claims or the benefits of a 60-month plan, and that 25 the Debtors have implicitly waived the right to exit this bankruptcy with a discharge 26 before those 60 months have expired. However, nothing in the applicable law supports 27 the imposition of such a waiver rule. Indeed, the BAP has acknowledged, in dicta, that 28 “a debtor’s circumstances may justify a reduction in plan length” from what was 1 previously set forth in the originally confirmed plan. Mattson, 468 B.R. at 373. Neither 2 does “the doctrine of res judicata [prevent debtors] from shortening the term of their 3 plan.” Id. at 372; see also § 1329(a)(2) (allowing plan modifications that “extend or 4 reduce the time for [paying claims under the plan]”); Than, 215 B.R. at 435 (“Res 5 judicata does not apply to the provisions sought to be modified.”).

6 The fundamentals of a waiver situation were explained in Groves v. Prickett, 420
 7 F.2d 1119 (9th Cir. 1970):

8 A waiver is an intentional relinquishment or abandonment of a 9 known right or privilege. A waiver can be employed only for defensive 10 purposes. Although it can preclude the assertion of legal rights, it cannot 11 be used to impose legal duties. As minimum requirements to constitute an “implied waiver” of substantial rights, the conduct relied upon must be clear, decisive and unequivocal of a purpose to waive the legal rights involved. Otherwise, there is no waiver.

12 Id. at 1125–26 (citations omitted). There is nothing in the record to even suggest that the 13 Debtors intentionally “relinquished or abandoned” the “right or privilege” of completing 14 their bankruptcy in less than 60 months. They were not required to make such an 15 irrevocable “election” when they confirmed the Original Plan. The initial 60-month term 16 was required at the time to permit the Debtors to successfully reamortize their secured 17 obligations; thus, there was cause to confirm a plan that exceeded 36 months. Indeed, 18 the Debtors could not have confirmed a plan with a term greater than 36 months without 19 a showing of cause. See § 1322(d)(2). Had the Debtors originally proposed a 44-month 20 plan to amortize their secured obligations, the Trustee would have had no basis on which 21 to object and demand a longer term. The creditors are not prejudiced by the fact that the 22 Original Plan had a 60-month term. They were not entitled to any distribution based on 23 the disposable income and chapter 7 liquidation tests.

24 The Trustee’s Objection is not based on any statutory predicate. Rather, it is 25 based on equitable principles of “fairness.” He argues, “Debtors originally gave 26 creditors the opportunity to seek increased payments that correspond to their increase in 27 income for 60 months. To take away this opportunity now without a good faith showing

1 is inherently unfair.”<sup>10</sup>

2 In the absence of a statutory basis for locking the Debtors into a 60-month plan, 3 the Trustee is essentially asking the court to exercise its general equitable powers under 4 § 105(a).<sup>11</sup> However, it is not clear that the court’s equitable powers under § 105(a) 5 extend that far. The U.S. Supreme Court recently addressed the scope and application of 6 § 105(a) to remedy an egregious case of bad faith conduct by the debtor in litigation of 7 an adversary proceeding. See Law v. Siegel, No. 12-5196, 2014 WL 813702 (U.S. Mar.
 8 4, 2014), rev’g 435 F. App’x 697 (9th Cir. 2011). The Supreme Court acknowledged 9 that, in addition to the statutory power under § 105(a) to carry out the provisions of the 10 Code, the bankruptcy court “may also possess ‘inherent power . . . to sanction abusive 11 litigation practices.’” Id. at *5 (quoting Marrama v. Citizens Bank of Mass., 549 U.S.
 12 365, 375–76 (2007)). The Court then admonished, “But in exercising those statutory and 13 inherent powers, a bankruptcy court may not contravene specific statutory provisions 14 . . . . Section 105(a) confers authority to ‘carry out’ the provisions of the Code, but it is 15 quite impossible to do that by taking action that the Code prohibits.” Id.

16 In the proceeding below in Law v. Siegel, the Ninth Circuit had followed the 17 precedent established in Latman v. Burdette (In re Latman), 366 F.3d 774 (9th Cir.
 18 2004), a decision now abrogated by the Supreme Court’s decision. See Law, 435 F.
 19 App’x at 698. The Ninth Circuit applied § 105(a) to bestow upon the bankruptcy court 20 the general equitable power to surcharge a debtor’s state law homestead exemption to 21 compensate the bankruptcy estate for over $500,000 of administrative expenses resulting 22 from the debtor’s bad faith conduct. See id.

25
 26     <sup>10</sup> Trustee’s Suppl. Br. 5:9–11 (emphasis added).

27 28     <sup>11</sup> Section 105(a) provides in pertinent part, “The court may issue any order, process, or judgment that is necessary or appropriate to carry out the provisions of this title . . . .”

1       The Supreme Court rejected all of the arguments for such a remedy, finding that 2 there was no statutory basis in the Bankruptcy Code for doing so. See Law, 2014 WL 3 813702, at *6. “[F]ederal law provides no authority for bankruptcy courts to deny an 4 exemption on a ground not specified in the Code.” Id. (emphasis in original). The Court 5 noted that the “equitable surcharge” conflicted with two provisions of the Bankruptcy 6 Code: § 522(b), which allows a debtor to exempt property in the first place, and 7 § 522(k), which expressly limits the use of exempt property to pay for administrative 8 expenses. See id. at *5–6.

9       Applying the same rationale to this case, there is nothing in the Bankruptcy Code 10 that authorizes this court to force the below-median-income Debtors to remain in 11 bankruptcy for 60 months when first, § 1325(b)(4)(A)(i) only required the Debtors to be 12 in bankruptcy for 36 months and second, there is a specific statutory prohibition, 13 § 1329(c), that requires a showing of cause to even permit an extended term. In light of 14 the holding in Law v. Siegel, this court does not have the equitable power to give the 15 Trustee the ruling he seeks.

16       Conclusion.

17       Based on the foregoing, the court finds and concludes that the Debtors’ Modified 18 Plan has been proposed in good faith. The Trustee’s Objection will be overruled. The 19 Debtors’ Motion to confirm their sixth modified chapter 13 plan will be granted. The 20 Debtors shall submit to the Trustee a proposed confirmation order consistent herewith.
